Despite Presidential Pardon

Nixon Can Face Prosecution For Civil or State Offenses

-A full and absolute pardon does not rule out the possibility that former President Richard Nixon could be tried for civil or state offenses or even be impeached by Congress, constitutional experts said today. The pardon means Mr. Nixon probably will not be charged or convicted of any federal crimes he might have committed while president. It also makes very unlikely a prosecution by special Watergate investigator Leon Jaworski and the federal grand

Today, the Senate majority leader, Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., suggested that Mr. Jaworski ignore the pardon and proceed with the investigation and possi-ble prosecution. One of Mr. Ford's closest In the words of the Supreme Court case, Mr. Nixon's pardon renders him "as innocent as if be friends described the granting of the pardon as "a decision of con-science" and said it had been had never committed the offense. But, the experts noted, the pardon made against the recommendaapplies only to "offenses against

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (IHT). Florida, where some Watergaterelated transactions occurred. He can still lose his right to practice law. He can still be subject to civil suit by private citizens damaged by his official actions. Charges Not Expected

> As a practical matter, bowever. no one really expects to see Mr. Nixon defending himself against state criminal charges. "It's pretty damned doubtful that, after something like a presidential decide to move against Nixon." said Gerald Gunther, a Stanford University Law School professor. The pardon also does not free him from being called as a witness in related cases, specifically Watergate cover-up trial. Indeed, the framers of the Constitution expressly broadened the President's pardon power in an-ticipation of cases where the person charged could provide testimony against his "accomplices." The pardon, therefore, also does not apply to cases of contempt of court or perjury resulting from such testimony. Finally, the experts said, the only recourse that Congress would have against Mr. Ford's pardon would be to resume impeachment proceedings against Mr. Nixon. Congress did so in a similar case in 1876 when it impeached Secretary of War William Belknap. In the present case, this possibility is considered remote.

The presidential power to par-don comes under Article II of the Constitution, which reads: "The President shall be commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several states when called into the actual ser-(Continued on Page 3. Col. 1)

In Washington, congressional Republicans and Democrats tended to focus on different issues in reacting to the pardon. The Republican defense was often lukewarm, and a number of influential Republicans joined most Democrats in raising strong objections.

With some exceptions, Republicans made only brief comments, arguing that President Ford had wisely tempered justice with mercy in order to hasten healing of the wounds of Watergate. Democrats, on the other hand.

Ford Postpones Announcement About Amnesty

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (UPI). - President Ford has postponed indefinitely his expected announcement of a plan for conditional amnesty for draft evaders and military descriters, a White House spokesman said today. John Hushen, acting White House press secretary, said events of the last weekmeaning the pardon of former President Richard Nixon-have not allowed the President to focus on the question of amnesty for war resisters. Asked if the Nixon pardon was "more urgent" than the question of amnesty, Mr. Hushen said: "That seems a conclusion you can draw." Mr Hushen said Mr. Ford has not "finished his consideration of what be plans to do about amnesty. It's a very complex subject, more complex than he thought initially, and he wants to be personally involved in the entire matter."

Another resignation announced today was that of Philip Lacovara counsel to Leon Jaworski. the special Watergate prosecutor, and third in rank at the prosecutor's office. Mr. Lacovara said that "recent developments have made it appropriate" to hasten his planned departure but spokesmen for the prosecutor's office would not elaborate on whether this referred to the Nixon pardon. Aboard the press charter flight accompanying Mr. Ford to Pittsburgh today, a White House alde said Mr. terHorst, who tried to return candor to the White House news office, also felt his credibility as the President's spokesman had been shattered by events

He said that his experts would look into a claim by the Organiestion of Arab National Youth for the Liberation of Palestine that one of its members carried explosives on board the plane, TWA Flight 841 from Tel Aviv to New York, and detonated them in a snicide mission.

The claim was made in Beirut, Later today, a statement attributed to the same underground organization was distributed in Paris and said that more such actions are planned against airlines serving Israel.

The Paris statement said that the group had planned yesterday's crash and others in the future to serve as a warning both to Arab governments and to the established leadership of the Palestinian movement. In addition, it said, yesterday's crash was designed to execute six members of an Israeli death squad. The statement said that one of the group's operatives-Eduardo Santo, a Chilean-blew himself up with explosives smuggled aboard under his belt. A person with that name was listed among the plane's passengers.

Greek newspapers said that the passengers were not thoroughly checked by Athens airport security and the Chilean would have been able to carry explosives into the TWA Boeing 707 yesterday.

The pilot of the plane, which crashed during a storm yesterday, said in his last radio message that one of his four engines was on fire and he was trying to make an emergency landing on the Greek island of Corfu, an Athens flight controller said. The aircraft fell into the sea about 30 minutes after takeoff from Athens for Rome. There were 79 passengers, including three infants, and nine crew members Greek officials said that rescue workers, hampered by high seas and strong winds, had recovered 18 bodies.

U.S. Put Guard on A-Arms in Greece, Turkey

By John W. Finney

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (NYT). -Since the Cyprus crisis erupted in mid-July, the United States has taken precautionary measures to move atomic warheads stockpiled in Greece and Turkey, Defense Department officials have dis-

The main cause of concern, the officials said yesterday, was not so much that the warheads might be selzed by Greek or Turkish forces hut rather that, in the event of fighting between the two countries, some of the warheads might be damaged and cause radioactive contamination.

Concern in the Pentagon over the security of the warheads was so great that early in the Cyprus crisis, according to the officials, the Defense Department ordered special measures to protect the Among the measures was an order to a carrier with the Sixth prepared to send in a Marine de-tachment by helicopter to recover the warheads. While declining to confirm this particular order, a Defense Department official said: "We are prepared, should certain contigencies arise, to remove the warheads."

Jealousy Aroused In congressional circles, it was also suggested that another step taken by the United States was to remove warbeads mounted on Greek and Turkish fighterbombers. This reportedly caused a certain amount of jealousy between the two nations, with each demanding to know whether the United States was taking a similar step with the other.

As in several other NATO nations, Greek and Turkish planes on so-called "quick reaction alert" are armed with atomic warheads. Technically, the warheads remain under U.S. control, but, in time of war, they would be turned over to Greek or Turkish forces. The United States has hundreds

Danish Survey Shows 53% Now Oppose EEC

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9 (UPI) -A majority of Danes would say "no" to the European Common Market if a referendum were held today, an opinion poll published in the newspaper Ber-lingske Tidende showed today. According to the poll, 53 per cent of those questioned opposed and 31 per cent approved Danish membership. In the referendum on Oct. 3, 1972, the figures were 57 per cent for and 33 per cent Denktash said that almost all of the 40,000 Turkish Cypriots now in Greek-controlled areas will move to the Turkish-occupied north of the island and settle there permanently.

He also said that 95 per cent of the young Greek-Cypriot re-fugees would not be allowed to return to their homes in the Turkish-held area.

Asked whether he planned to gather all Turks dispersed in Greek-controlled areas around the island and bring them to the north, Mr. Denktash said: "That is not my intention, but that is what is will come to because the Turks will not stay in the south. The Turks will come to the north."

Turkish Cypriots now virtually encircled in villages in the south and southwest will move to the north to farm land left by the Greek-Cypriot refugees, he said. Turkish Protest

Leaders of Turkish forces protested to the UN peace-keeping force today that vehicles of tha Greek-officered Cypriot National Guard moved at 2 a.m. into an area near Nicosia airport, which is under UN control. A UN spokesman said that the peace-supervision force was investigating the complaint. He said that the airport area

Catalan Activists Arrested in Spain BARCELONA, Sept. 9 (UPI).-

The police today announced the arrest of 67 suspected Catalan opponents of the regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco in a convent yesterday, the second such roundup in less than a year. A statement said the 67 were members of the Assembly of Catalonia, an outlawed anti-gov-ernment organization with some separatist and Marxist tendencies. They allegedly met to discuss support of the Democratic Junta of Spain, a Spanish opposition group recently created in Paris. In October last year the police arrested 113 Assembly of Catalonia members, including lawyers, teachers and underground labor leaders. They were meeting in a downtown church here. The 113 were arrested and have not yet of atomic warheads stationed in than in Greece. Turkey, for example, according to congressional sources, could drop the equivalent of "millions of tons of TNT."

The Defense Department and the Atomic Energy Commission have steadily refused to confirm that nuclear warheads are stotioned for allied use in Greece and Turkey, as well as in other NATO countries such as Belgium. the Netherlands. West Germany and Italy. But this fact has been largely an open secret ever since the United States, in 1959, entered into "mutual defense" agreements for atomic cooperation with two nations,

No Danger Seen

While the precautionary protective measures remain in effect, defense officials stressed that they saw no imminent danger to the atomic arsenals or any need to remove them from the two coun-

Under the influence of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, however, both the Defense and State Depart-ments find themselves under some pressure to remove the stock-piles, which the committee reluctantly authorized in 1959.

Sen. Stuart Symington. D-Mo. the chairman of the committee's Subcommittee on Military Applications, said in an interview that he felt "more solid" about the weapons stationed in Turkey but "still, as far as I am concerned, I would like to pull them out of both countries." "I don't think we should have them there under the present circumstances," he said.

In recent years, senior members of the AEC have expressed repeated concern over the physical security of U.S. atomic warheads stationed in foreign countries. In part, their concern was that the warheads might be selzed by local forces. More recently, however, the fear was that the warheads might be taken by terrorist groups and used as blackmail. 1973 Inspection

As a result of an inspection trip to Europe in 1973 by Sen. John Pastore, D-R.I., and Sen. Howard Baker jr., R-Tenn, the subcommittee recommended to Defense Department and AEC that measures be taken to improve the physical security of the stockpiles. Since then, Sen. Pastore said,

"there has been some improva-ment," but he warned that the stockpiles were "still vulnerable." Basically, he said, "we rely on the condescension of our allies" to protect the stockpiles against

The stockpiles customarily are tachments of U.S. troops. In addition, there are various safeguard measures, such as mechanical and electronic lock-and-key systems, to prevent the detonation of a weapon without the approval of U.S. authorities. Because of these systems, defense officials expressed confidence that, even if warheads in e or Turkey were they could not he detonated. Tha Pentagon's concern, they said, was that the warheads might be damaged in the course of hostilities, with a spillage of the highly toxic plutonium material in the weapons.

Defense officials describe the resent safeguard systems as providing "a virtually foolproof guarantee" against unauthorized detonation of a warhead. But congressional sources pointed out that the Pentagon's confidence in the present systems apparently is not unlimited. The Defense Department, partly as a result of congressional urgings, is now proposing to move into a new generation of protective de-from the military sector of the alliance has opened a gap in the alliance's radar network that military sources believe could have serious consequences in any future Middle East crisis. Gravest Problem

Soviet pressure on Spitsberger is regarded by alliance officials as the most serious of these problems. The United States, qualified sources said, believes that Norway must resist the pressure, exerted in diplomatic ex-changes, because of the 'immense strategic importance" of the sea area south and southwest of the Norwegian islands, which border the Barents Sea. The situation in northern Norway has deteriorated to the point where senior officers regard futura Soviet pressure for the demilitarization of the North Cape area, now held by a tiny Norwegian force, as "probable rather than possible." Western officers believe that the methodical extension of Soviet sea and air power into the Norwegian and Baltic Seas already has seriously weakened the alliance's position on the northern flank, regarded as the key to strategic control of the North Atlantic and the main sea-lanes between North America and Europe. All Soviet nuclear-missile submarines are based at Murmansk and must pass between Spitsber-gen and Norway's North Cape into the Atlantic. Under present arrangements, their passage can be detected by the alliance. Although Norwegian government officials believe there is a possibility that oil will be found on the seabed around Spitsbergen, it is generally believed that the Russians want joint rule of the islands as much for strategic The Dutch defense cuts, announced July 9, will be fully effected by 1977. The alliance's Defense Planning Committee has told the Dutch government that its force reductions will have "adverse effects on the defense capability of the alliance" and that other allies would have to increase military and financial contributions to compensate for the cuts. British officials say that their reductions will not affect Britain's contribution to NATO. But alliance officers believe that simble cuts will inevitably reduce the forces in West Germany since a reduction of British garrisons outside Europe, will not alone constitute major savings for the westiened economy, Opposition to Gen. Haig's appointment, according to alliance sources, has more to do with his inexperience in dealing with the allies and in commanding large units than his having been former President Richard Mixon's chief of staff.

The gap in the alliance's radar network caused by the Greek withdrawal would be extremely serious in the event of a crisis in the eastern Mediterranean. The Greek section of the network covers the Bulgarian frontier and the most direct air routes from Soviet bases in Central Europe to the Middle East,

State Dept. Denies Deceiv Congress on Policy in Chi

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (AP). The State Department, accused of misleading a Senate panel, to-day stood by its congressional testimony that there was no U.S. attempt to interfere with Chile'e internal politics.

The dispute arose with reports that CIA Director William Colby told Congress in April that the Nixon administration authorized funds for covert CIA activities designed to make it impossible for the late President Salvador Allende to govern. Mr. Colby reportedly said that Mr. Jaworski, however, took the position that the pardon for Mr. Nixon and the cover-no charges brought against his former aides were "two different matters entirely"—a view that be evidently also expressed to the White House about a week ago.

Although he said the White House neither sought nor obtained his advice about a pardon, the prosecutor said President Ford's White House counsel, Philip Buchen, did ask him when Mr. Nixon might come to trial "if" he were indicted.

"I gave him the best estimate I could," Mr. Jaworski said. He emphasized, however, that he gave Mr. Buchen no indication of whether he intended to seek an indictment.

Prosecution sources said that Mr. Jaworski'e office had not ruled out the possibility of relessing later a compilation of the evidence against Mr. Nixon, as signed as Vice-President. Case Against Six credibility. But the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times called Mr. Ford's grant of a pardon "an act of ccurage that will ultimately benefit the country." It said: "Nixon's acceptance of the pardon implies an admission of guilt. So that there can be no attempt to distort the truth, either historically or for political purposes, Mr. Ford should have required from Nixon an honest and forthright admission of his guilt."

Comment around the nation: The Albuqueroue (N.M.) Sen Mike Mansfield D-Mont. the Senate majority leader, sald was disturbed by the circumstance that perhaps as many as 40 or 50 persons had either been indicted or sent to prison in the aftermath of the Watergate and related scandals, while the former president would not even be charged.

Sen. Mansfield said the pardon would appear to be a presumption of guilt. He said Mr. Ford's action conflicted with his own deep belief that all men are equal This latter aspect of the par-

Page 4—Tuesday, September 10, 1974

Too Far, Too Soon

There is much to be said for President Ford's justification of his pardon for former President Nixon-more than many of the critics of this step will admit. The clamor over how, when and where Mr. Nixon was to undergo prosecution for the acts and omissions that produced his resignation was an unsettling factor in a time when the new President was seeking more political and emotional stability.

Moreover, it may be donbted whether a full succession of trials, of Mr. Nixon as well as of his associates, would hring that complete understanding of Watergate that so many demand and all would like to see,

And, in terms of punishment, Mr. Nixon has and will suffer more from the deflation of his hopes, the loss of his power, the severe and sweeping public condemnation of his course in the White House that his resignation accepted as facts, than any action by the courts that might follow. Mr. Nixon's statement that his way of dealing with Watergate was the wrong way, and "a burden I shall bear for every day of the life that is left to me," while a good deal less than an admission of moral guilt, is, in terms of his own "pain and regret," quite true.

But when all that is said-and there are many Americans who will not agree with it, as implied condonation of crimes against the state-President Ford's action can still be disputed as too sweeping and premature. As Sen. Muskie put it: "We still do not know what if any crime Mr. Nixon committed ... pardons are usually granted at the point where the accused is in jeopardy of punishment, and we have not reached this point in Mr. Nixon's case."

In other words, the blanket pardon inhibits the law from even indicating where Mr. Nixon might have violated its terms. And for those who wanted full prosecution and punishment of the former President, Mr. Ford's action will be an irritant, not an emollient. The President's fear that the "tranquility to which this nation has been restored in recent weeks' might be "irreparably lost" is quite as likely to become true through his act as he feared it might through inaction. For even those who might have acquiesced in pardon for Mr. Nixon after the fact of at least initial prosecution are disturbed by the nature and timing of the pardon. Mr. Ford has gone too far, too soon, and his national influence will suffer

The Failure of Mr. Ford

In giving former President Nixon an inappropiate and premature grant of clemency. President Ford has affronted the Constitution and the American system of justice. It is a profoundly unwise, divisive and unjust

Like many lesser public figures who have commented at various stages of the long Watergate controversy, President Ford has sadly confused his responsibilities to the republic and his understandable sentiments toward one who has inflicted grave damage upon the hody politic. Both are valid and compelling but they should be clearly distinguished.

The four reasons that President Ford cites for his decision lay bare this confusion. In summary, he asserts that Mr. Nixon has already suffered enough, an adjudication of his offenses would be divisive, a fair trial would be difficult to achieve, and uitimately, in any event, he-Mr. Ford-would have to decide the matter in the light of his own conscience and sense of compassion.

The adjudication of Mr. Nixon's offenses and the character of the criminal trial in which those offenses would be weighed and argued are one set of concerns. Mr. Nixon's suffering and his claims on President Ford's conscience as a political sponsor, friend and Tellow human being are another set of con-

President Ford's overriding duty was to his public responsibilities. It is essential that the crimes committed by several of Mr. Nixon's closest associates and apparently by Mr. Nixon himself be determined in a court of law by the same rules of evidence and the same procedures of due process that apply in the American system of justice to every citizen.

Nothing less would satisfy the natural sense of justice of the American people and of a government founded upon principles of equality and legality. Given the historic significance of Mr. Nixon's offenses that led to his becoming the first president ever to resign. It was likewise essential that the historical record be unmistakably clear.

After the exact nature of the wounds that Mr. Nixon and his associates had inflicted upon the body politic had been determined and after the exoneration or conviction of those accused, only then could those wounds begin to heal.

Once the processes of justice had run their course, it would be possible and timely for the President and the nation to take into account the personal merits of the offenders and try to mitigate the penalties of law by recourse to the enduring human values of mercy and charity; if clemency had followed conviction rather than preceded it, there would have been wide acceptance of President Ford's exercise of his power to pardon.

As it is, by recklessly pushing aside Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski and the grand jury and the trial jury as well. President Ford has fallen short in his duty to the republic. made a mockery of the imperative claim of equal justice before the law, promoted renewed public discord, made possible tha clonding of the historical record, and undermined the humane values he sought to

His duty was to see that the law was enforced and wrongdoers punished. His duty was to see to it that those who have already served in prison for their crimes such as E. Howard Hunt, Donald Segretti and Egil Krogh: those now serving their sentences such as Charles Colson and John W. Dean 3d, and those who stand accused of grave crimes such as H. R. Haldeman, John N. Mitchell and Mr. Nixon himself would all be treated the same.

Instead, he has laid American jurisprudence open to the severe and lingering accusation that there is one kind of justice for the agents and underlings and another for the ex-President in whose name and for whose supposed benefit the misdeeds were

Rather than calm public passions and restore a fundamental sense of national unity, Mr. Ford has ignited fresh controversy. It might have stirred less public outrage if the President, in what amounted to secret and discreditable plea bargaining with his predecessor, had insisted on a frank and forthright confession of guilt. Instead he settled for an unctuous, guileful statement from Mr. Nixon in which the former President admits nothing specific and skillfully blurs the issues.

Moreover, the arrangement avoids nothing in the way of publicity and public controversy. Presumably, the cover-up trial involving six of Mr. Nixon's former aides is still to be held and be is sure to be called as a witness. He will have to testify at length under oath to all the demeaning details of the cover-no.

Because his pardon has immunized him, he cannot avoid testifying by claiming the Fifth Amendment privilege against selfincrimination inasmuch as he cannot now be prosecuted. If he testifies falsely, he is still open to prosecution for perjury. In short, nothing has changed except that the defendants and the jurors are to be confronted with the savage irony that the man who ordered the cover-up, benefited from it and repeatedly lied to the American people and to his own congressional defenders shout it is now to be a principal witness in the trial of those who did his bidding. They face the possibility of terms in prison while he can look forward to well-paid retirement in his luxurious seaside villa.

In a time when the nation has been repeatedly dismayed by so many acts of corruption. intrigue and deceit. President Ford has signally failed to provide courageous and impartial moral leadership. When asked less than a year ago whether he would do precisely what he has now done, Mr. Ford indicated to Congress that he would not, adding, "I do not think the public would stand for it."

At his first news conference on Ang. 28, President Ford again pledged himself to respect the special prosecutor's obligation to take necessary action against "any and all individuals." Although not ruling ont the ultimate exercise of clemency, the President observed: "There have been no charges made. There has been no action by the courts: there has been no action by any jury, and until any legal process has been undertaken I think it's unwise and untimely for me to make any commitments"

Instead of adhering to those wise public pronouncements, Mr. Ford has now moved secretly and suddenly to block the normal workings of justice. It is an act of flagrant favoritism, it can only ontrage and dishearten millions of his fellow citizens who thought that at last the laws of this nation would be enforced without fear or favor. This blundering intervention is a body blow to the President's own credibility and to the public's reviving confidence in the integrity of its

The Types of Inflation in the U.S.

By James Tobin

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Three decades of experience tell us that inflation is endemic to modern democratic industrial societies. Fortunately the same record indicates that these economies are nonetheless capable of yielding their citizens substantial gains in well-being decade after decade, But hysteria about inflation may lead to policies that keep economic progress well below its potential.

The United States inflation of 1973-74 is a complex and difficult case, unique in our history. In general we may distinguish three types of inflation: (a) excess demand inflation, popularly summarized as "too much money chasing too few goods," (b) the wage-price-wage spiral, and (c) shortages and price increases in important commodities. Our ourrent inflation is a combination of (b) and (c). But public discussion generally ignores these distinctions and identifies every inflation, including the present case, as the classical type (a). From this diagnosis, mistaken in my opinion, follows the classical remedy, the "old-time religion" of stricting aggregate demand by tight monetary policy and by fiscal austerity.

With some oversimplification, we can say that the U.S. suffered severe case of excess-demand inflation (a) in 1966, when President Johnson and Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara piled war demands onto an economy already operating close to its capacity, and ignored their economists' pleas to raise taxes. Reenforced by a lesser dose of excess demand in 1968, the 1966 outhurst left in its wake a surprisingly stubborn case of inflation type (b), the wage-priceturn of its own, this inflation first accelerated and then abated. somewhat under the deliberately recessionary policy of 1969-71, assisted by Phases I and II of the controls introduced in August

Window Dressing

At the end of 1972 the ongoing wage-price dynamic was producing overall inflation of 3 1/2 per cent per year, down from 5 per cent in 1969 and 1970. However, it was obvious, as events confirmed, that some of the improvement was transient window dressing which would not survive relaration of controls and completion of the recovery from reces-

Some observers view the 1973 expansion of the American economy as another case of excess demand and blame the Federal Reserve and the Nixon budget for overheating the economy once again. But unemployment never fell below 4.6 per cent, and the government cooled off the boom pretty quickly after midyear. In any case, the underlying wageprice-wage dynamic was proceeding at year-end with wage in-creases of 7 to 8 per cent, which with normal productivity gains would mean price inflation in the neighborhood of 5 per cent per

But meanwhile the United States was hit by a severe type (c) inflation, a spectacular increase in commodity prices. For the first time since the Korean war, external events sharply increased the prices facing American producers and consumers. Everyone knows about the world shortages of food and energy, and about the aggressive new policies of the oil-producing nations, who have in effect imposed an excise tax of $10 to $15 billion a year on American consumers of their products. What may be less well understood is the role of the 16 per cent depreciation of the dollar in foreign exchange since 1970. Working precisely as the architects of the policy hoped, dollar depreciation made imports about $10 billion a year more expensive to Americans. Combined with booms in Europe and Japan, depreciation also increased foreign demand for U.S. products, notably basic agricultural and industrial commodities. Foreign demands for our exports created shortages and price increases for

Differences

American buyers.

Now there are two important differences between types (b) and (c) inflation. First, the wageprice-wage spiral keeps going of cresses are covered by price boosts, and subsequent wage settlements respond both to past wage patterns and to price inflation. The type (c) commodity price increases, however, are once-for-all adjustments to new supply-demand situations: those prices won't necessarily fall but all that is needed to improve the rate of inflation is that they stop rising.

Second, the wage-price-wage spiral does not of itself impose any collective loss on the nation or on the urban nonagricultural sector of the economy in which it occurs. One man's price is another's income; when buyers pay more, sellers receive more. The inflation may proceed unevenly, so that some workers, consumers, and property owners lose while others gain; such relative distributional changes are always occurring, inflation or no inflation, in the 1969 elections.

But it is simply vulgar non--no less for constant repetition by economists, politicians, bankers, and journalists—to say that an internal self-contained inflation causes a loss of economio welfare in aggregate.

The commodity price increases are a different matter. They are symptoms of a real national economic loss, and in particular a loss to urban wage-carners and consumers. In current circumstances, we are paying more for oil and other imports. We're not just paying more dollars but more work and resources; under our new foreign exchange rate policy we can no longer buy foreign goods with paper dollar IOUs. We are also paying more, about $25 billion a year gross, to our of real wages are the painful and unavoidable consequences. To attribute them indiscriminately to "inflation" is superficial and mis-

The economy is currently in recession, and the prospects are for abnormally slow growth in outbut and for rising unemployment The Federal Reserve is administering the classical medicine for excess demand inflation (a), because that is the only medicine it has. Some of its spokesmen, supporters and critics regard every inflation, almost by definition, as the excess demand type on the ground that whatever the proximate origins of inflation, it could be avoided by sufficiently resolute restriction of demand. The idea is that the wage-priceware spiral will unwind if enough slack-idle capacity and unemployment-is created. Extreme advocates of the old-time religion even argue that determined disinflation of demand could have yielded big enough reductions in prices of other goods and services to offset or average out the recent price increases of food, fuel and basic materials.

The trouble with this prescription is that it will not succeed without years of economic stagnation, high unemployment and lost production, with much more severe consequences for real economic welfare than the inflation itself. Experience shows that the wage-price-wage spiral is extremely resistant to unemployment, resion and economic slack. Ths unpleasant fact of life is that the wage and price-setting institutions of our economy, and of every other non-Communist economy, are bissed toward inflation. Wages and prices rise when and where demand is strong much more readily than they declina when and where demand is weak, While the classical medicine would have prevented the Viet-

taking the oath of

The main inflationary threat this year is that the temporary inflation of type (c) will be per-manently built into the ongoing wage-price-wage spiral The setbacks to real wages reflected in higher prices of food, fuel and other commodities cannot really be reversed. General attempts to "catch up" by escalated wage settlements will simply be defeated by accelerated price inflation. So Washington is right to be alarmed by this year's wage settlements.

Helpless Fed

But there is very little the Federal Reserve can do about them, even if the Fed provokes a fullare already in the works, and they depend much more on the recent history of wages and prices than on the current strength or weakness of demand. The budgetmakers of the Executive and the Congress are in much the same position. They, too, can be nobly and resolutely austere, pretending they are fighting a classical type (a) inflation. But the results of budget cutting will be measured more in lower unemployment and production statistics than in wages and prices. Present antiinflation hysteria may well yield policies that hring us the worst of several worlds.

Is there a more promising and less costly way to confront the unique inflationary problem of 1974? If ever there was a time for what the Europeans call "incomes policy," the time is now. ment with wage and price controls was never a good idea, and the stop-and-go alternation of phases certainly didn't help. But the total abandonment, in April of this year, of every legal or informal restraint was incredibly untimely.

Need to Lead

What was needed was presidential leadership—in open, candid understanding with business. labor, agriculture and consumers -to establish realistic moderate guideposts for wages and prices. Wa still need what some of us have called a new social contract for the economy, along the fol-lowing lines: (1) Monetary and fiscal policy would be geared, not to increase unemployment, but to keep it from rising, and to achieve, not to thwart, the 4 per cent a year growth in production of which our economy is capable. (2) Workers' take-home pay would be increased by cutting Social Security payroll taxes and by making the structure of those taxes more equitable and progressive. This tax cut would provide part of the demand stimulus needed under (1) (3) Les bor, for its part, would consent to a general wage guidepost of 8 or 9 per cent, and Washington would expect and exact comparsble moderation in business and

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., would use the power of the federal dollar to correct the problems of too many doctors in the suburbs and too few in rural areas and urban slums; too many specialists and not enough primary-cars physicians and too many poorly trained graduates of foreign medical schools.

16-5 Vote by Panel The bill, which passed the committee last week by a 10-5 vote, would cost $1.5 billion during five years. It would replace a health manpower bill that expired June 30. Sen. Kennedy, in a speech Friday to the Association of American Clinics, said that medical schools and health care organizations "have failed" to solve tha problems of overspecialization and maldistribution of physicians. Instead of merely giving the medical schools federal money for each student they enroll, as previous health manpower bills have done, the Kennedy-Javits bill would require that all students agree to practice in under-served areas before the school can get federal funds.

The schools would get a grant of $3,250 a year for each student -about one-third of the cost nf educating a doctor. The rest of the federal money goes to medical schools in research and other grants tied to special projects. Students who need more federal aid can qualify for scholarship programs that pay the full tuition plus $2,500. But these students would have to serve for four years

Any student who backs down from his pledge to serve in areas where there are doctor shortages would lose his license.

"Physicians," the committee said, "are disproportionately located in the Northeastern and Western regions of the United States, while the South and North Central states are underserved.

Moreover, the bill would requira the secretary of health, education and welfare to certify specialty training programs in order to cut down on specialties where there are too many doctors and increase the number of family practitioners.

This would also cut down on the number of foreign medical gradoates. There are now twice as many specialty training slots available as there are American graduates to ful them, so that the positions either go unfilled or are filled by foreign graduates. Another effort to cut down on the number of foreign medical graduates would require that all licensing tests include proficiency

Drought, Lack of Fertilizers Imperil Crops in North India

By Bernard Weinraub

LUCKNOW, India, Sept. 9 jasthan, Harideo Joshi, the chief (NYT).-One of the worst droughts in years has struck northern India. The drought, conpled with fertilizer shortages and the lack of fuel for irrigation pumps, threatens to destroy rice and wheat crops and has led to grim forecasts of widespread hunger, even famine, in such states as Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh, Bihar, West Bengal and the western state of Gujarat. Tens of millions of people are facing food scarcities.

In Lucknow, the capital of India's largest state, Uttar Pra-desh—which, if it were independest, would be the eighth higgest nation in the world, with a pop-ulation of 90 million—an official said privately that "it is a dan-gerous situation. The monsoon

A spokesman indicated permis-sion would be forthcoming if and when Syria removed the mortars. Defense Minister Shimon Peres complained last week that Syria was violating terms of the disengagement pact by failing to rebuild and settle war-rayaged Kuneitra, The Syrians replied yesterday that Israel had refused to let Syrian engineers clear mines from the town.

Leftists Gain In San Marino Council Vote

SAN MARINO, Sept. 9 (Reuters).-The Communists and Socialists of San Marino, the world's smallest and oldest republic, made slight gains at the expense of the Christian Democrats and Social Democrats, who each lost two seats in yesterday's general election. The Communist vote of 3,245 gave the party 15 of the 60 seats in the Grand and General Council-one more than in the 1969 election. The Socialists, with 1,914 votes, now have eight seats as opposed to seven last time. The result would make it possible for the Christian Democrats (25 seats: to form a 42-seat center-left coalition with the Social Democrats (nine seats), and Socialists such as has ruled the republic in recent years.

Smaller Parties

The remaining three seats were shared by smaller parties. It was the first time women were allowed to run for office and three, two of them Communists, were elected out a total of 23 seeking office. Electoral officials said the voter turnout was slightly more than 79 per cent, with 14,000 of the registered voters casting ballots

The Christian Democrats attributed their slide to the fact that 400 registered voters resident in the United States had not returned to San Marino for the elections as they did in 1969. Tradition says the republic was founded in AD 300. It has an area of 24 square miles and a population of 17,000. But 20,000 other citizens live abroad.

Wolfgang Windgassen, 60, Wagnerian Tenor

STUTTGART, Sept. 9 .- Wolfgang Windgassen, 60, one of the leading Wagnerian tenors of the last quarter-century, died here yesterday of a heart attack.

Mr. Windgassen also was opera director of the Württemberg State Theater here, a post to which he was appointed four years ago after having been a member of the company since the end of World War II. He continued to sing, however, his last performance being in the role of Florestan in Beethoven's "Fidelio" here a week

Mr. Windgassen's career lasted 33 years, but it was not until 1951 that he began to gain international attention. He was chosen by Wieland Wagner to sing the tille part of "Parsifal" that year at the newly reopened Richard Wagner Festival in Bayreuth, and the recording made from these perinrmances was the first of many live and complete recordings to be made at Bayreuth. It also began an association of more than two decades with the festi-val, where the tenor sang a total of 190 performances in almost every principal tenor part. It also began an international career that took him to the New York Metropoltan, London's Cov-ent Garden, Vienna and else-where, but almost exclusively in Wagnerian roles—due in part to his unwillingness to sing in any language but German. In Stuttgart, however, where he remained a member of the ensemble, he was as likely to sing Verdi, Mozart and even an occasional operetta. Mr. Windgassen was born in Annemasse, France, where his parents were vacationing in the summer of 1914. His father, Fritz Windgassen, also a noted tenor, was one of his teachers, and he was the grandson of an actor, Emil van der Osten. He is survived by his wife. Lore, who also was a singer. His son, Peter, is an operatic stage director.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (NYT).— Michael Benthall, 55, the British stage director and producer who was director of the Old Vic from 1953 to 1962, died here on Friday. In his nine years as artistic and policy director of the Old Vic Mr. Benthall established an international reputation for excellence in the classical theater, compiling an auspicious list of credits at home and taking his company on acclaimed tours to the United States, the Soviet Union, Poland and other countries. He was also esteemed for his contributions to opera, ballet and the contempo-rary theater.

He made his professional dibut in London in 1908 as an actor, and subsequently appeared in minor parts with production of the Old Vic.

After several opera productions he staged "The Micrchant of Venice" at Stretford-Upon-Avon in 1947, and three more Shakespearean productions the follow-

Mexico Troops Find, Rescue Senator Seized by Guerrillas

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 9 (AP). -Mexican Army troops fought a gun battle yesterday and freed Sen Ruben Figueroa and four aides who had been held captive for 3 1/2 months by Lucio Cabanas, a leading guerrilla, but Cabanas eluded the soldiers, the Defense Ministry announced.

four-ring circus last weekend, backgammon tournaments, surf championships, yearling sales—and nearby, at Saint-Jean-de-Luz, e week-long music festival was climaxed by Yehudi Menuhin playing Mozart in the chapel where Louis XIV was

Such activity is fairly new to Biarritz, a sedate, aristocratic resort launched by Empress Eugénie in 1854. A former Spanish princess, Eugénie de Montijo loved that small, whaling fishing port where she came as a child After her marriage to Napoléon III, she moved the summer court to Biarritz and the Villa Eugénie, a large house

After the fall of the Second Empire, the empress's villa was turned into a hotal; it burned down in 1903. It was rebuilt and is now the Hotel do Palais, a grandiose building in pure Napoleon III. Still very much the center of Biarritz social life, the hotel has a lot of period paintings and furniture, including, in the bar, a one-ton crystal chandelier, which takes two men and five months to clean up.

At the time Biarritz got started. Deauville was also being launched by the Duc de Morny and it became a tradition through the years to leave after the Deauville Grand Prix in August and more down to Biarritz.

So the Biarritz season is on now and lasts until the of the month. One of the reasons may be that the weather, which is usually so-so in July and August, picks up in September and last weekend

Biarritz was at its sunniest best, Unlike newer, flashier resorts, Biarritz (the name means two rocks in Basque) has always been quietly elegant. Its éclat came from its long list of royal visitors, who ranged from Queen Victoria to King Alphonse XIII, Edward VII to Emperor Haile Selassie.

BIARRITZ, Sept. 9 (IHT) — Edward VII was so fond of Biar-Biarritz was a three, if not ritz that in 1903 he sent for ritz that in 1903 he sent for Hubert Asquith to nominate him prime minister rather than inter-

The tub is still there, in the empress'e former apartments which are now rented to Mrs. Sacha Guitry, William Paley (CBS's president) or Frank Sinatra. The Duke and Duchess of Windsor kept up the tradition and the duchess, who rates Cabana No. I at the hotel's pool, left two days ago.

Then there were the colorful Russian grand dukes who came here before World War I to while the rough Russian winters

For sheer extravagance, nobody has yet to top the late Aga Khan who once gave a "dog party" for his sad-eyed cocker spaniel, but Biarritz still has unusual millionaires. One of them insists on picking his own lobster, and signing it to make sure he is getting the right one. Another, who owns 270,000 head of cattle in Brazil. was once asked by a Chicago slaughterhouse for 2,000 calves. His answer: "What color?"

Today, the resort draws a lot of Americans but it is still heavily dominated by the Spanish colony which started coming in the early days and now comes because gambling is forbidden in Spain. They lend the place an aura of old-fashioned elegance. "Nobody, but nobody, walks around the streets in a bathing suit," Roger Boltz, director of the Hotel do Palais, said sternly.
But in the past few years, the local anthorities, no doubt realis-

The backgammon tournaments vere started here three years ago by Prince Alexis Obolensky, a tall, lanky man who got the backgam-mon fad rolling in the Bahamas 10 year ago. "It started as a lark," be said, "but before I knew it, it became a full time business." Together with his three children. they have pretty much blanketed the world resorts with nonstop tournaments that take in Biarritz once a year. Their 4,000 players include a majority of Americans, most of whom spend their lives traveling the resort route, But last week's tournament was won by Philip Martin, an Englishman and very much a

The surf addicts are a fresher, and younger, lot. The age group is 20, mostly boys because that is a rough sport, and they hang about Le Sunset Bar. The sport was launched here in 1958 by screenwriter Peter Viertel who was on location for Hemingway's "The Sun Also Rises."

When Viertel saw-the beautiful rollers breaking in the Plage Basques, he asked for his board to be sent from California. Together with French friend Joel de Rosnay, they started a surfing club that now counts 600 members, mostly Biarritz residents. The surf championships ended yesterday and two out of five prizes went to Tahitians (where the club also has a branch).

But the most lively promotion bit is that Biarritz was chosen as the theme of the next April in Paris ball, to be held in New York Oct. 25. Headed by Prince and Princess de Lobcowicz in Paris, the Franco-American charity ball should give Biarritz an international shot in the arm. In Biarritz, Marquis Guy d'Arcangues (whose family owns a whole village down here, including an excellent, low-priced auberge) and Maurice Carrère, Maxim's director and an ardent Basque, are busy working out the

'Aladdin' as a Ballet: A Long-Overdue Idea

By Oleg Kerensky

LONDON Sept. 9 (IRT).—It is surprising that no choreographer seems to have thought of "Aladdin" as a suitable subject for a ballet until now. After all, it is as good a fairy tale as "The Sleeping Beauty" or "Cinderella," and better than "The Nutcracker." Scenes like the enchanted cave and the final wedding of the triumphant hero and the beautiful princess should be naturals for spectacular balletic

In England, "Aladdin" is familiar as a Christmas pantomime, a traditional combination of music hall, musical comedy and revue, with a girl playing the hero and a man playing his comic mother.

But "Cinderella" and "The Sleeping Beauty" get that treatment, too, which has not prevented them being equally successful classical ballets. So it is clever of Laverne Meyer, the director of Northern Dance Theatre, to choose "Aladdin" for his second three-act ballet, following his . "Cinderella" CHT, Feb. 16,

Tricks Avoided

Mr. Meyer has deliberately avoided pantomime tricks and devices and has told the story simply and clearly in a mixture of dance and mime. He is aided by John Preser's designs costumes which are exotic and lavish without impeding the dancers or concealing their bodies and sets which are simple but quite attractive in their conventional mock-Oriental way.

Complete success is thwarted by two big problems. The first is that no Tchaikovsky or Prokofiev has written a musical score for "Aladdin." Rather than selecting existing pieces from the works of some such romantio composer as Kenneth MacMil-lan, John Cranko and Peter Darrell did for some of their original three-act works, or using a potpourri by various composers as Roland Petit has done with his new Proust ballet, Meyer commissioned a score from Ernest Tomlinson, an experienced arranger and composer of light

The result is lengthy—the ballet runs nearly three hours and eclectic. The music ranges from neo-classical to electronic, inchides Eastern effects and pretty tunes and is danceable but lacks coherence and distinction. There is so much of it that Mr. Meyer has to pad out the action with mime, meaningless processions,

As 'Beatlefest' Shows

Beatles May Be Gone—B They're Still Most Popula

By John Rockwell

NEW YORK, Sept. 9 (NYT).— The Beatles broke up five years ago, but they remain the most popular rock group of all— to judge from the 4,000 or so Beatlemaniacs who packed Manhattan's Commodore Hotel Saturday afternoon for the first day of "Bestlefest 74." The convention which commemorated the 10th anniversary of the Beatles' invasion of America, continued through yesterday. The event could clearly have attracted more than 4,000, but the convention's promoters, noting the overflowing state of the 2,500seat Grand Ballroom and the packed adjacent rooms, imposed a cutoff on ticket sales.

The Beatles always had the image of a healthy, well-meaning, up-beat group, and that seemed precisely the sort of fan the convention attracted Mark Lapidos, whose idea the whole thing was, said that mail-order ticket-buyers averaged upward from 20 years old. But there were lots and lots of teen-aged faces on display.

There was a little pushing and shoving in the line waiting to be let in and one posterful of Beatles memorabilia was reported missing. But mostly people were there to have fun and to share Beatles anecdotes and trivia, and they seemed to be doing just that, The Grand Ballroom was the scene of an alternating succession of Beatles films—both the familiar features, like "A Hard Day's Night" and "Yellow Submarine," and more exotic promotional clips supplied by Apple Records; talks and reminiscence by people who had been associated with the group Odurray the K. U.S. Orders Inspection of R-R Engines

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9 (AP-DJ).—The Federal Aviation Administration has ordered U.S. airlines to inspect the Rolls Royce engines in Lockheed Tri-Ster passenger planes and replace any engina found to have cracks in an area where a loss of oil

The directive sent yesterday. says the inspections are mandatory and must be carried out on engines with more than 30 flight hours.

A spokesman for the FAA said the order follows incidents last week in which two TriStars belonging to All ?lippon Airways, the Japanese domestic carrier, were forced to land with their tail engine after a loss of oil pressure occurred in the two

The FAA spokesman estimated that there are 57 TriStar jets in operation in the United States. The directive states that if an engine-casing crack is found that would not cause an oil leak the engine must be reinspected every 100 hours or every 70 flight cycles (a cycle is a startup and shutdown of an engine).

A regular inspection must take place every 400 hours after the initial inspection, or every flight cycles Temperature Blamed

TOKYO, Sept. 9 (AP-DJ) .-Engine fallures on two Rolls-Royce-powered Lockheed TriStars that prompted All Nippon Airways to ground its six air buses apparently were due to oil tube cracks opened by temperature stresses, engineers said.

They said they thought that extreme temperature differences on the inside and outside of the Rolls RB221 engines' ahminum casings caused the hairline cracks. Two of the triple-engine Tri-Stars had to make emergency landings last week because both their wing-mounted engines lost off pressure and only tha tail engine remained in action. All Nippon Airways' officials said 18 of its 25 TriStar engines are older models which have oil tubes that crack more easily than the new ones. An airline spokeman said grounding of the six TriStars eant cancelling 28 flights in four days and a multi-milliondollar loss. But he refused to comment on whether All Nippon would demand compensation from Rolls-Royce

The Transport Ministry has decided to permit All Nippon Airways to put the planes back in service on condition that all the engines be replaced with new models and undergo "regular and severe inspection.

The ministry lifted the ban on the grounded planes when the airline said it would replace the old engines with new ones. The airlina said it will make inspections every 10 flight hours on each new wing engine, while new tail engines will be inspected every 100 hours.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

European Aircraft Firms Sign Pact Six of Europe's leading aircraft manufacturere have joined forces to build aircraft to chal-lenge U.S. supremacy in the aviation field. The companies say they signed an agreement last week at the Farnborough air show, the annual showcase of the British aviation industry. The six companies are to map out a joint program for an integrated European serospace industry over the next few months, sources report. The companies are British Aircraft Corp., Britain's Hawker Siddeley Group Ltd., France's Ste. Adrospatiale, and West Germany's Dornier, Messerschmid-Boelkow-Blohm and VFW-Fokker. Governments of the three countries, sources say, back the second and have indicated to their national airlines they should huy from the consortium rather than from U.S. companies, which currently supply about three-quar-ters of Europe's civil aircraft needs.

Easier Monetary Policy Admitted by Fed Aides

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 (NYT). High Federal Reserve officials have gone out of their way to point out, for the first time, that the Fed's highly restrictive mon-etary policy has already been eased to a significant degree. They add that no "substantial" further easing should be expected. These comments from highly authoritative Fed sources cama shortly after a majority of economists, conservative as well as liberal, agreed at the White House "pre-summit" meeting with President Ford last Thursday that the time had come for a moderate easing of the tight money policy. We've been ahead of the game."

said a high official. Money market participants have presumably sensed what has been happening since the delicate easing process started in about mid-July. But the Fed Itself has been silent until now.

Rate Shows Ease

Specifically, last week when a seemingly technical change was made in bank reserve requirements on large certificates of deposit, the Fed played down in its announcement any possible "easing" effects of the move. Now high officials say openly that the move was intended to be a step toward ease.

The major evidence that policy has eased is the movement of the key federal funds interest rate, the only rate that the Fed virtually controls by its actions. This is the rate on very short-term loans from one bank to another.

In the week ending July 3 this rate was at its peak of 13.6 per cent. Then it began to fall irregularly and by last week it was down to 11.ē per cent.

Not an Aberration

"And that is where we want it to be," said a high official, meaning that it was not a market aberration of some kind that had reduced the rate. Officials point out that the Fed has at last succeeded in its objective of slowing sharply the growth of the "monetary aggregates," chiefly the money supply. Growth of the narrowly defined money supply, demand deposits and currency, fell to an annual This is actually less than the Fed's longer-term target. Final figures for August are not yet in but the growth will be about 3 per cent, officials said. Growth in September "will probably not be

It is "not accidental" that this achievement has permitted the Fed to relax policy somewhat, a high official said. But the reduction in the federal funds rate is not intended to set off a rapid new expansion of the money supply, it was emphasized.

While declining to discuss future policy, a high official was willing to say that "no substantial easing is to be expected." He did not define "substantial." but this comment appeared to be a rejection of the conclusion of the White House meeting. "We - bave not been lacking in alertness in the past. Perhaps we will not be lacking in the future," the official added.

In its September review, it said a resurgence in feed grain prices, already visible at the spot and wholesale levels, suggests large increases in food prices over the coming months.

U.S. Buyers Say Recession Is Spreading

NEW YORK, Sept. 9 (AP-DJ). -The recession is spreading, according to U.S. corporate purchasing agents.

Business activity in August deteriorated as new orders, pro-duction and forward commitments worsened. The rate of price increases eased, but inventeries still were accumulated at a helty pace, a survey by tha National Association of Purchasing Management Inc. indicated. "The rate of rise in new orders and production stalled completely," said Elwood Andrews, chairman of the trade group's business survey committee. "Only once since January 1971 have rew orders failed to rise as they did last month, and production actually turned negative." he said.

Meanwhile, inventeries of raw materials rose while production fell, a potentially hazardous indicator, Mr. Andrews said. About 15 per cent of corporate buyers surveyed said their raw materials stocks increased in August, up from 13 per cent the previous month. Forward inventory commitments slackened, with fewer orders placed on a 180-day basis and more calls for 60 and 90-day deliveries.

Capital - expenditure commitments in the 180-day category also declined, the survey showed. Fewer commitments wer- mada on capital items in that range last month than at any time in the past year. Some 20 per cent of purchasing agents said they anticipate canceling or deferring major purchased items due within 180 days.

July, statistics indicated On the price front, a drop in the rate of cost escalation continued during August, marking the fifth consecutive monthly decline. The survey showed that 72 percent of purchasing agents paid higher prices, compared with 80 per cent in July and 95 per cent last March. The August figure is the lowest in the past 12 months, but only 2 per cent reported that they were able to acquire materials at lower prices in August, compared with 4 per cent the previous menth

We started trading money just when money became the most exciting commodity around.

That was only the beginning.

The International Monetary Market would like to make the following announcement: We were right.

At the risk of sounding terribly immodest, our concept of bringing foreign currency futures trading to the public has proved to be extremely functional. Public interest is astonishing. Our timing was superb-and no accident.

After years of research, we opened for business two years ago, just as the post-World War II rigid monetary exchange system fell apart.

Floating exchange rates are here to stay and with them, the opportunity for profit (or loss) on currency fluctuations is here to stay. The need for importers and exporters to hedge selling prices is here to stay. And, consequently. we're here to stay.

We are not relaxing in contentment, however. To our original contracts in foreign currency futures, we have added U.S. and Canadian silver coins and we will be adding more contracts in the near future. We have a gold contract ready for trading whenever the President approves gold ownership for U.S. citizens.

We're proud of what we've created and we'd like to tell you more about it. Just send us the CNOTHING fails like success." around the character of Roberts. He deprecated to sort of epitaph for his Fitzgerald-like bero in "The Disenchanted." John Leggett, an editor turned novelist, comes forth with a psychologically more intricate embroidery on the subject of success in "Ross and Tom." The Ross is Ross Lockridge jr., whose "Raintree County" was a blockbuster back in 1948 and the Torn, Thomas Heggen, whose "Mister Roberts" struck gold as both a novel and a play about the same

Ross Lockridge committed sui-cide in his car by carbon mon-oxyde asphyriation at the age of 34, the day before his book reached No. I on the best-seller list; Thomas Heggen drowned in his own bathtub a few months later aged 29, a rasor at hand but unused, his organs steeped in Sec-onal and Amytal. They never met in life but one might say they were linked in death, since Tom talked often of Ross's suicide and seemed to have an emotional identification with it.

Both Ross and Tom were from the Middle West, both had driv-ing mothers and fathers who were ineffectual dreamers. But there were wide differences as well. Ross was an upright, gogetting young man, a hard work-er, a brilliant student, drivingly ambitious; he married a nice Indiana girl whom he met at an Epworth League meeting and remained faithful to her. Tom was an indifferent student who con centrated on journalism in col-lege, writing for the University Minnesota Ski-U-Mah, competing with rival humorist Max Shulman; he married a campus sweetheart but went off to war and divorced her soon after he came bome; he resented authority, pulling pranks in-college, shocking the solid citizens up in Pleasantville with his irreverent remarks while working for the Reader's Digest. Later he liked kinky Village scenes and led the young literary lion's promiscuous sex life; the apartment he died in he was sharing with Alan Campbell, Dorothy Parker's onand-off husband, who purveyed his own brand of decadence and

Ross labored six years on "Raintree County," living on a $2,000-a-year instructorship at Simmons College, working in tiny apartments and rented summer places, wife and four kids under foot: As success pumped into him: his ego inflated like a balloon and his book became another Plato's "Republic." BRIDGE

Experts have divided opinions sbout one not-uncommon situation in bidding: if it becomes clear at a low level that game must be reached, is a raise to game weaker or stronger than a raise short of game?

The traditional view is that the jump to game indicates some extra strength. The modern idea is that the gentler action is more encouraging, permitting a slam exploration below the game level. In the suction shown in the diagram, North's two-level response, coupled with South's reverse bid of two hearts, showing extra values, guaranteed a game. As North was using the traditional method, the jump to game showed additional strength and South was happy to continue to slam, using Blackwood to make sure that the pertuership was not missing two aces.

In the newer style four hearts would have shown a minimum without slam interest, and three hearts would be the appropriate hid, leading to the same slam contract. This deal was played in reivate game in New York, and the opening lead was crucial. There was a strong temptation to lead the spade ace, but the West player resisted it. He reasoned correctly that South was likely to hold the spade king: a player who uses Blackwood should have first or second-round control of any unbid suit.

He made the effective lead of a trump. The declarer drew trumps, hoping that one of the black suits would produce a 13th trick. With the actual distribution; defeat was now inevitable, Even with all the cards in view, it is not easy to see how the slam can be made after a trump lead. At the same time, the longest, most expensive and most bitter labor dispute in professional sports remains unsettled, while members of the NFL Players Association perform without contracts after a belated arrival to summer training camps.

Whether the summer strike tunnelt will affect the regularseason standings won't be known for several weeks. But two players representatives, Ken Reaves and Frank Pitts, already have charged uniforms, and several others have talked of resigning their positions after being blitzed by both sides during a stalemate that seems certain to extend well into the regular season. In addition, Bill Curry, the resident of the players' association, was cut by the Houston Oilers, and Kermit Alexander and Tom Keating, vice-presidents, were dropped by their teams. All three are older players who might have had to struggle for jobs even in normal times. The Rams have picked un Curry. The strike, more than any single factor, exposed pro football's fragile hold on the fans. Minus most veterans for the first three weeks, the average attendance for 65 exhibition games this year dipped to 35,160, down signifi-cently from 54,984.

The mexhaustible reliever of the Los Angeles Dodgers smiffed a Red rally in the eighth inning and protected a 7-4 victory that shoved the defending National League West champions 3 1/2 games behind his front-running club.

Ignoring the boos of Cincinnati fans, who packed Riverfront Sta-dium to a capacity 50,000 for the third straight day, he needed only two pitches to make three outs in the eighth. And then he secured the rubber match in the series by striking out the three men Cincin-nati sent at him in the last in-

"Pitching against these guys (the Reds) is like pitching against a bunch of high school kids." That's what a Cincinnati sportscaster reported Marshall said after he threw his 20th save at the Reds Friday night.

"That misquote keyed up the whole club," said Dodger manager Walter Alston. "It did us more good than it did the Reds."

Marshall, who pitched two innings Friday and two-plus in a losing relief effort Saturday, broke his own big-league record for ap-pearances when he took the mound for the 98d time yesterday. Joe Morgan, his injured ankle heavily taped, was on first base with a walk after Pete Rose's homer had pulled the Reds within three runs.

In the past, most of us could get away with giving a strange child a glass of milk and a cookie. But in recent years we seem to be sustaining large masses of youth, which I have dubbed, for the want of a better name, the Sleeping Bag Generation.

Last month my grocery hill for a family of four on Martha's Vineyard was $791. This is what happened.

Three sleeping bags showed up at the door. A voice from one of the sleeping bags said: "We're very good friends of your daughter Hilda and she said we could camp oo your property when we got here." "I have no daughter named

"What's her name?" a voice from another sleeping bag asked. "Jenny."

I gave permission for them to camp out on the lawn. When my daughter came home, I informed her that three of her dearest friends had arrived and set up camp. "Boys or girls?" Jenny asked. How the hell would I know." I replied.

It turns out that sleeping bags require large amounts of nourishment. While those of us who lived to the house could get by on bluefish or eggs, the sleeping bags had to be fed steak, ham, imported cheeses. French bread. butter and B good brand of beer.

Every day my daughter, who oever did find out their names, carried down provisions to the sleeping bags. The zippers would onen up automatically and they would consume $60 worth of groceries at a feeding.

The Sadness Of the Son Of Gauguin

By Charles Hillinger

DAPEETE, Tahiti - He has tried repeatedly to find the genius within himself that his name implies should be there, but he has falled. And today, at 75, Emile Gauguin, son of one of the founders of modern painting, Paul Gauguin,

"Even if I were a poor artist I could have made a lot of money because of my name. But I am a terrible artist. My drawings make no sense."

Long the object of ridicule, Gauguin now lives with his son in a small Tahiti house on stilts on the outskirts of Papeete. "If my father had lived five or 10 years longer I know I would have learned from him. I, too, would have been a painter ... Paul Ganguin died at 55 in 1963. His son, Emile, was 4. Gauguin wrote April 19, 1899, the day Emile was born to the 17-year-old Tahitian woman, Pau'ura a

"It is a happy event for me, because the child perhaps will lead me back to life, which at present I find so unbearable." Pau'urs had moved into Gauguin's but New Year's Day 1896. A girl born to the couple that year died in childbirth.

Marking Birth

To mark the birth of Emile, Gauguin painted two similar paintings, each titled "Maternity," both showing two Tahitian women standing beside Pao'ura, shown breast-feeding Emile. One of the paintings hangs in the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad, the other is owned by David Rockefeller.

Neither Emile Gauguin nor his mother. who died in 1940, ever owned a Gauguin

The name Gauguin is synomymous with Tahiti. Here the artist did his best work from the time of his arrival in 1891 from France until his death 12 years later. A node of Pao'ura titled "Arii Vahine" (The Noblewoman) hangs in Moscow's Pushkin Museum. Gauguin considered it one of his finest paintings. A marvelous museum dedicated to Gauguin lies at the foot of Taravao Mountain ou a peaceful lagoon at Papeari, 31 miles from Papeete. But nowhere in the South Seas, so far as is known, remains an original Gauguin artist, Gaugnin's only offspring in Tahiti has been the object of ridicule and scorn all his life.

Tahitians have mocked and made fun of him because of his shortcomings, because he spent years sleeping and begging in the streets of Papeete," said one of Emile Gauguin's few friends.

Homer Morgan, 48. who left the University of Southern California shortly before graduating and migrated to Tahiti in 1949. now runs a popular hotel in Papeete. The Americao expatriate and a Swiss, Paul Baumgartner, befriended Gauguin in the late 1950s.

"Emile was sleeping in an abandoned refrigerator at the time, barely making enough money to feed himself by selling fish traps," Morgan recalled.

"Paul and I had the idea of getting Emile an easel some brushes and paint. Instead of sitting on a curb selling fish traps, we thought, if he could draw anything, anything at all, sign his famous name to it, he probably could do quite well. Emile made some marks on a sketch pad that he said were boats. That was his first effort. He couldn't even sign his name. He didn't know how. We taught

At his son, Ato Tear's, house, where he now lives, Emile smiled and admitted: "I was no good as painter. I tried. But it was all wrong. One eye up. One eye down. Ears twisted. My paintings made no sense then. They make no sense when I try now."

Marcel, and I would do the drawings for him. Papa would sign the drawings," said Emile's son, Ato, 31. "Then he would sell

"But our drawings were almost as bad as papa's," Ato said. "None of us has the least bit of artistic talent." In 1963, a French woman seeking to capitalize on Gauguin's name paid for Emile's flight to Chicago where she introduced him to an artist couple. "I lived in Chicago for 18 months as guest of the artists," said Emile. "They

"But I could not learn. I cannot paint.
I am a no good artist. So I came home to Back in Papeete, Gauguin again sold fish traps, again begged for money when des-perate, again slept in the gutter. He was mocked and ridiculed by the islanders as in the past. For the last five years he has been living with Ato, his daughter-in-law, Tehaamaru, and the couple's three children. Ato is a night desk clerk in a Papeete Hotel.

"I love my papa," Ato said. "But none of my brothers or sisters will have anything to do with him. He was sleeping in the street when I took him into my house. "I don't have much money. It is B burden to care for my paps, but I could not let him go hungry and sleep in the

"My brothers and sisters say I am foolish to take care of 'that stupid old man.' They will not help support him in any way. But he is my papa."
